Dear Mr. Snow,

Your agency has prepared a plan which further threatens the trout and steelhead populations in California. This may seem of little consequence compared to the priority of development and growth. However, only a plan which preserves our freshwater fisheries is worthy of consideration. Any other plan is exploitation. The people of California and future generations deserve the preservation of that which has been a part of our heritage. Dams aren't the only answer, they are a simple answer to a complex problem. Please consider other alternatives which preserve inland fisheries. I would appreciate a response.

Sincerely,

Bill Wernett
